THE GREAT Baltimore Piano Manufactory

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,

Manufacturers of

GRAND, SQUARE AND UPRIGHT

PIANO FORTES,

BALTIMORE, MD.

These Instruments have been before the public for nearly Thirty years, and upon their excellence alone attained an unprecedented pre-eminence which pronounces them unequalled. Their combines great power, sweetness and fine singing quality, as well as great purity of intonation, and sweetness throughout the entire scale. Their is pliant and elastic, and entirely free from the stiffness found in ordinary Pianos.

In Workmanship

they are unequalled, using none but the very best SEASONED MATERIAL, the large capital employed in our business enabling us to keep an immense stock of lumber, &c., on hand.

☞ All our SQUARE PIANOS have our New Improved Over Strung Scale and the Agraffe Treble.

☞ We would call special attention to our late improvements in GRAND PIANOS and SQUARE GRANDS; Patented Apr. 11, 1868, which bring the Piano nearer perfection than has yet been attained.

Every Piano Fully Warranted for Five Years.

We have made arrangements for the Sole Wholesale Agency for the most Celebrated PARLOR ORGANS and MELODEONS, which we offer Wholesale and Retail, at Lowest Factory Prices. WILLIAM KNABE & CO.

Instant Relief For

The Asthma.

Having been afflicted with that terrible complaint—completely unfitting me for business for years at a time—for the last twelve years, and at last found a remedy that gives

have concluded to have it prepared for sale, so that others similarly afflicted can receive the benefit of it, assuring them that

It will do all, and more than all promised for it; and, that persons once using, will never be without it.

As numerous others who have used it can testify.

Can be had at the Drug Store of WILLIAM H. BUECHLING, Rochester, Pa., or will be sent by mail to any address on receipt of one dollar, and ten cents to pay postage. CHAS. B. HURST. nov16,'70:1y] Rochester, Beaver county, Pa.

THE SURE ROAD TO SUCCESS.

A WORD TO AGENTS.

There is no scarcity of books to sell. But the great success of an agent lies in his selecting that work which meets the wants of the time, and deals most powerfully with the living issues of the day. The recent efforts of the enemies of Protestantism to banish the Bible from the Public Schools, and the late attempts in the Legislature of New York and Illinois to legalize this outrage upon our civil and religious liberties, have aroused in the minds of all true Protestants a desire to know and have circulated a more thorough knowledge of the intents and purposes of this great organization, which boast they will possess this country before the close of the Nineteenth Century. THE OPEN BIBLE deals with these questions, and the readiness with which the first two editions have been sold is sufficient proof of the interest felt in the book.

A REMINDER.

To Debilitated Persons,
To Dyspeptics,
To Sufferers from Liver Complaint,
To those having no Appetite,
To those with Broken Down Constitutions,
To Nervous People,
To Children Wasting Away,
To any with Debilitated Digestive Organs,

Or Suffering with any of the following Symptoms, which indicate Disordered Liver or Stomach, such as

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness, or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the heart, Choking or Fluttering Sensations when in a lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pains in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, &c., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, & Great Depression of Spirits.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,

A Bitters without Alcohol or Spirits of any kind.

Is different from all others. It is composed of the pure Juices, or Vital Principle of Roots, Herbs and Barks, (or as medicinally termed Extracts,) the worthless or inert portions of the ingredients not being used. Therefore, in one Bottle of these Bitters there is contained as much medicinal virtue as will be found in several gallons of ordinary mixtures. The Roots, &c., used in this Bitters, are grown in Germany, their vital principles extracted in that country by a scientific Chemist, and forwarded to the manufactory in this city, where they are compounded and bottled. Containing no spirituous ingredients, this Bitters is free from the objections urged against all others; no desire for stimulants can be produced from their use. They cannot make drunkards, and cannot under any circumstances, have any but a beneficial effect.

HOOFA ND'S GERMAN TONIC,

Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases when some alcoholic stimulant is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bottle of the Tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM, and flavored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the Bitters is overcome, forming a preparation highly agreeable, and pleasant to the palate and containing the medicinal virtue of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1.50 per Bottle. Such many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulent used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheaper price, but is it not better to pay a little more and have a good article? A medicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefitted by it will most certainly be cheated.

SPEAK FOR THESE REMEDIES.

Who would ask for more Dignified or Stronger Testimony?

Hon. GEORGE W. WOODWARD, formerly Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and present Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, writes:

PHILADELPHIA, March 16, 1867.

I find "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in cases of debility and want of nervous action in the system. Yours truly,

GEORGE W. WOODWARD.

Hon. JAMES THOMPSON, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28, 1867.

I consider Hoofland's German Bitters" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it.

Yours with respect,

JAMES THOMPSON.

Hon. GEORGE SHARSWOOD, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania:

PHILADELPHIA, June 1, 1868.

I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.

GEORGE SHARSWOOD.

Hon. Wm. F. Rogers, Mayor of the City of Buffalo, New-York:

Mayor's Office, Buffalo, June 22, 1869.

I have used "Hoofland's German Bitters and Tonic" in my family during the past year, and can recommend them as an excellent tonic, imparting tone and vigor to the system. Their use has been productive of decidedly beneficial effects.

WM. F. ROGERS.

Hon. Jas. M. Wood, Ex-Mayor of Williamsport, Pennsylvania:

I take great pleasure in recommending "Hoofland's German Tonic" to such as may be afflicted with Dyspepsia. I had the Dyspepsia so badly it was impossible to keep any food on my stomach, and I became so weak as not to be able to walk half a mile. Two bottles of Tonic effected a perfect cure. JAMES M. REMEMBER

THAT

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES

Are the medicines you require to purify the Blood, excite the torpid Liver to healthy action, and to enable you to pass safely through any hardships or exposure.

DR. HOOFLAND'S

PODOPHYLLIN,

Or Substitute for Mercury Pills.

TWO PILLS A DOSE.

The Most Powerful, yet Innocent, Vegetable Cathartic known.

It is not necessary to take a handful of these pills to produce the desired effect; two of them act thoroughly, powerfully, cleansing the Liver, Stomach and Bowels of all impurities. The principal ingredient is Podophyllin, or the Alcoholic Extract of Mandrake, which is five times more powerful, acting and searching than the Mandrake itself. Its peculiar action is upon the Liver, clearing it speedily from all obstructions, with all the power of Mercury, yet free from the injurious results attached to the use of that mineral.

For all diseases, in which the use of a cathartic is indicated, these pills will give entire satisfaction in every case. They NEVER FAIL.

In cases of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and extreme costiveness, Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic should be used in connection with the Pills. The tonic effect of the Bitters or Tonic builds up the system. The Bitters or Tonic purifies the Blood, strengthens the Nerves, REGULATES the Liver, and gives strength, energy and vigor.

Keep your Bowels active with the Pills, and tone up the system with Bitters or Tonic, and no disease can retain its hold, or ever assail you.

Recollect that it is DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES that are so universally used and highly recommended; and do not allow the Druggist to induce you to take anything else the may say is just as good, because he makes a larger profit on it. These Remedies will be sent by Express to any locality, upon application to the PRINCIPAL OFFICE, at the GERMAN MEDICINE STORE, 631 Arch St., Philadelphia

SELECT POETRY.

SMILE WHEN YOU CAN.

When things don't go to suit you,
And the world seems up side down,
Don't waste your time in fretting,
But drive away that frown;
Since life is one perplexing;
It is the wisest plan
To bear all trials bravely,
And smile when'er you can.

Why should you dread to-morrow
And thus spoil your to-day?
For when you borrow trouble
You always have to pay;
It is a good old maxim,
Which should be often preached—
Don't cross the bridge before you,
Until that bridge is reached.

You might be spared much sighing
If you would keep in mind
The thought, that good and evil
Are always hap combined!
There must be something wanton,
And though you roll in wealth,
You may miss from your casket,
That precious jewel—Health

And though you are strong and study,
You may have an empty purse,
(And earth has many trials,
Which I consider worse!)
But whether joy or sorrow
Fill up your mortal span,
'Twill make your pathway brighter
To smile when'er you can.

HOW GIRLS SHOULD WALK.

A good many years ago—let me look in the glass again—never use hair dye,—yes, a great many years ago, I was studying my profession in a medical office with several other students. Just below stood a bookbindery, and a little above, the residence of a poor widow. A girl of twenty years passed backward and forward, from one to the other, several times a day. Very rarely did she pass our office without one or more of us observing her. Very natural, you say. But you don't understand me. She was not a handsome girl. Her dress was of the plainest calico, and, suppose on account of her occupation, it was not always clean. But, nevertheless, she was one of our staple attractions.

Our office was on the main street, and above us were the residences of the rich. Hundreds of girls with handsome faces and rich dresses passed every day, but we were not on the lookout for them. It was only the book-binding girl that drew us to the window.

One of the fellows would cry out, "Here she goes. Come quick, John; quick, Henry."

Curious, wasn't it?

And what do you suppose so excited our interest.

She walked well! Ah! I can see her now! What a queen.

Queenly, we exclaim, with reference to a certain manner of walking. We never say queenly mouth, or queenly eyes, or queenly nose. The word is applied only to a certain style of personal carriage. When we see a woman pass, carrying her head and shoulders in a peculiar way, stepping off in a grand, elastic style, the word queenly leaps to every lip.

Our book-binding girl was a Methodist; and Ido not mind telling you that I used to go to the Methodist church pretty often, and always sat in the gallery, that I might see her come in and out. She frequented a little social organization, in which young men and women assemble for conversation, reading, singing, etc., I joined, although there was no other attraction than our queen.

You may think it very strange, but I was never introduced to her; I never spoke with her. Indeed, I carefully avoided a personal acquaintance, lest a lack of intelligence or sentiment might break the charm of her peerless bearing. I think that nothing in any woman has ever more impressed my imagination than that young woman's splendid mien. * *

Girls, the Creator has not made you all handsome. He has not given you all fine faces, or noble proportions; but He has given every one of you the capacity to learn to walk well.

Why, even a little woman, weighing but a hundred pounds, can make herself grand by a certain style of walking.

How say of you who desire to appear well,

Beaver, Pa., April 5th, 1871.

A REPUBLICAN convention was held at Washington, D. C, on the 29th to nominate a candidate for Delegate to Congress, and other territorial offices. On the first ballot Gen. N. P. Chipman received 11 votes for delegate to Congress and Frederick Douglass 27, and 37 scattering. On the second ballot, General Chipman received a majority of the whole vote and was declared the unanimous nominee of the convention. Richard F. Merrick is the Democratic candidate for the same office.

REV. JAMES COLDER has been chosen by the Trustees of the State Agricultural College as the successor of Dr. Burrows, recently deceased. Mr. Colder is a brother of William Colder is a brother of William Colder esq., of Harrisburg, and was formerly President of the Pennsylvania Fruit Growers' Society. He is a man of fine attainments and a good deal of experience. The Agricultural College felt the beneficial influence of Dr. Burrows, and showed signs of becoming a first class institution during his brief management. We trust that the progress it made then and the promise it gave of good results will not be arrested under the management of Mr. Colder.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS, as is well-known to almost every person in this country, is a colored man of fine abilities and one of the most fascinating speakers to be found in the United States. Mr. Douglass was unofficially connected with the San Domingo commission, and accompanied the commissioners to and from that Island. On their way back to Washington, the party took the steamer Georgiana from Acquia Creek for the Capital, and when about to sit down to their meal the officers of the boat refused to allow Mr. Douglass to take a seat at the table on account of his color. The commissioners very properly resented this insult to one of their party by leaving the table themselves.

THE North Carolinians are engaging largely in the impeachment business. They have just got through with the trial of their Governor, and deposed him; whereupon they turn their attention to one of their Judges. The House of Representatives of that State, on the 27th adopted articles of impeachment against Edmond W. Jones, Judge of the Second Judicial District. Article one recites charges of drunkenness and disgraceful conduct in Raleigh; article two, same offenses in Goldsboro; article three, same offenses in Tarboro; article four, same offenses in town of Williamston, Martin county, where he went to hold Court; article five charges offenses committed in Williamston similar to those in article four, but different in some particulars. The articles are generally supported, irrespective of party. Samuel F. Phillips, the Chairman of the Board of Managers, and others, presented the articles to the Senate last evening. They were received, and Friday next at 11 a. m. was fixed upon as the day and hour for the commencement of the sitting of the Court of Impeachment.

GENERAL BUTLER has evidently the knack of making things lively wherever he may. On last Thursday, after getting a little tired in the House of Representatives, he strolled over into the Senate chamber, and took a seat near where Garrett Davis was speaking against Mr. Sherman's Ku-Klux resolution. Gen. Butler sat very attentively listening to and watching Mr. Davis closely. Finally, Mr. Davis became very much excited, and in referring to the reports of Ku Klux outrages, made some very personal remarks, and actually shook his fist in Gen. Butler's face. His excitement apparently overcoming him, Mr. Davis abruptly sat down, when, for what seemed a long time to the spectators, the two sat glaring at each other like two tigers, until Mr. Davis became so much enraged that he could no longer restrain himself, and jumping up "went for" Gen. Butler in the old fashioned Kentucky style, calling him a "G—d d—scoundrel," and repeating the epithet several times. Gen. Butler sat like a statue, never moving his eyes, and coolly requesting him to go on with his speech. Mr. Wilson, evidently fearing a hostile demonstration on the part of Mr. Davis, went over to that side, and endeavored to pacify him, at the same time suggesting to Gen. Butler that it would be best for him to withdraw. The latter, however, sat still until Mr. Davis dropped his eyes, and then quietly walked over to the Republican side.

QUITE a large delegation of prominent men from South Carolina are now in Washington asking Congress and the Administration to take some decisive action relative to the disturbed condition of affairs in that State. It is estimated by the gentlemen here mentioned that since October, 1870, at least 400 political murders have been committed in South Carolina, chiefly in the counties west of Columbia. The number of those who have been whipped and otherwise assaulted is much larger. In answer to inquiries addressed to them, these gentlemen give it as their opinion that the recent outbreak and attending violence are the beginning of the campaign of 1872, and that the design of the Ku-Klux is to terrorize the Republican majority away from the polls or into the Democratic ranks. The conspiracy ignores Secession, it being asserted that the "Klan" take an oath against it. It involves, however, a determination to seize by force both the State and National Governments. One of the most notable facts about the Klan is that their bands are armed with rifles and revolvers of the most approved patterns. As evidence of this, it is stated that during the recent fights with the militia in Union and Chester Counties, more than 1,000 mounted men assembled at Chester Court House, all armed with new Winchester repeating rifles and Colt's revolvers.

THE new chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee does not seem to repose upon a bed of roses. A Washington dispatch to the Pittsburgh Commercial informs us that Simon Cameron is learning that it is one thing to be chairman of the Foreign Relation Committee, and another to be recognized as the leader of the foreign policy of the Senate. On Friday the Joint High Commission accompanied by Gen. Schenck, visited the Capitol, and after listening to Bingham's speech in the House, went over to the Senate Chamber. Various members of the Commission were soon engaged in conversation with several Senators, among them Sumner, whom they all treated in the most cordial manner. Finally Earl de Grey took Sumner to a sofa in the corner of the Senate chamber, evidently for the purpose of private conversation, and they both took a seat thereon. They had been talking together but a few minutes when Cameron got up and came over to where these gentleman were, and took a seat beside them. Earl de Grey instantly turned, shook hands with Cameron, and then proceeded with his conversation with Sumner, as if there had been no interruption. Cameron sat watching them for full ten minutes, and finding that no further attention was paid him, arose, stood with his hands in his pockets, looking considerably embarrassed, as if he did not know exactly what to do, and then walked back to his own seat. The incident created considerable amusement to several Senators who observed it.

MR. SUMNER'S SPEECH in the Senate on Monday March 27th, on the resolutions submitted by him on the preceding Friday, relative to keeping a naval force in the waters of San Domingo and Hayti during the pendency of negotiations for the annexation of San Domingo to the United States, was the most elaborate and exhaustive effort delivered in that body since the demise of Clay and Webster. The House of Representatives adjourned early, to afford its members an opportunity to hear the profound Statesman and erudite orator's views on the great question of San Domingo negotiations; and the cloak rooms of the Senate Chamber, and even the doors of the Senate itself, were thrown open to the ladies and the public who were anxious to hear the Senator. Only on one occasion prior to this has the Senate chamber been so thronged.

The facts of the case, and the law bearing upon it, were so fully, and clearly stated by Mr. Sumner, as to compel belief in the justice of his conclusions in regard to the impropriety of keeping a U. S. fleet in Haytian waters prior to and pending our negotiations for the purchase of one-half of that Island. And, while we fully concede this, it does not of necessity follow that the President has acted improperly, mistakenly, or by collusion for selfish ends, in the premises. On the contrary, we are of the opinion he has acted from honest convictions and patriotic motives.

The great length of the document precludes its publication in our paper. We think it will not only be of interest to our readers to procure it, but will amply repay perusal. It ought to have great weight in determining the result of pending negotiations and probably will have, although the resolutions were laid on the table by a large majority. We are satisfied that a majority of the Republican party are, at this time, opposed to annexation.

A WITNESS in the suit brought a short time ago by George Washington Bowen to recover the estate of the late Mme Jumel, on the ground of being her son, stated that she had heard her mother say that General Washington was the father of the plaintiff. This extraordinary statement, so totally at variance with the popular idea of Washington's character, created quite a sensation not only in the court room, but among the newspaper men, who commented on it freely, some affecting to believe the story and others doubting it. The witness, Mrs Vanderwort being called upon for additional explanations stated that her mother's way of relating the matter always impressed her (Mrs. Vanderwort) with the belief that it was "said by way of a joke," and so the matter rests. Mrs. Vanderwort's mother was on intimate terms of friendship with the Washington family, and this fact will doubtless cause many lovers of scandal to believe the garrulous old woman's story.

THE Journal Des Debats dated Paris, April 1st reports a collision at the bridge of Severs with Ducrot's men, and adds that the Batallions of the Commune are on the alert. The night previous fearing an attack, there were ten thousand men in the Bois De Belogne and a large number bivouacked in the Champs Elysees.

The gates of Malliot Alstile and point Du Jour, were closed. The Mot D'ordre says the citizens of the Commune will soon be published. The same paper states that a batallion provided with camping material, marched out the day previous in the direction of Passy.

—Meagre but sad news comes from the Asiatic squadron. It appears that in sending down the main-yard of the U. S. ship Colorado, her jeer tackles gave way and a heavy stick fell on deck, killing and injuring several.

—The Washington Chronicle pertinently inquires:

Would it not be well for Congress to make some inquiry, if it has not already been made, as to the class of men composing the rank and file of the army before they are used in an attempt to suppress the Ku-Klux? The popular belief is that the army at present, or certain portions of it, is made up largely of ex-confederate soldiers, many of them ex-commissioned officers, who would not be very reliable in case of an emergency. We know that many outrages have been committed with impunity under the very noses of United States troops.

—Horace Greely wrote a letter the other day to Mr. Ansel Warren, in whose newspaper office at Poultney, Vermont, he first learned printing, to congratulate the old gentleman on his golden wedding celebration at Quincy, Illinois and he took occasion to say, en passant: "I am poor, but it is my own fault; because I indorse other folks' notes. One was brought me to-day for $5,000, which I must find a way to pay within a few days. I have footed away at least $150,000 trying to help others, and it has done no good. Now I guess my foot is down that I will not indorse another note. So you see the stables all get locked after the horses are stolen. Let me hope that you and Mrs. Warren are well."

HERE AND THERE.

—They have strange titles in Japan. One of the high dignitaries in Jeddo is called his Grace of Fifty-five Umbrellas; another the Lord of a Hundred Fans, and a third the Supreme Controller of the Golden Poodles.

—A Charleston (S. C.) letter says that more than 3,000 residents of that city, at the firing on Sumter, lost their lives in the field by sickness and wounds, and that fully 10,000 more have quitted the State since the suppression of the Rebellion.

—Col Forney is, no doubt, of the opinion that he out-ranks Col. McClure. When the news of Mr. Forney's appointment to the collectorship of the Port of Philadelphia reached this city, this dispatch was sent over the wires:

HARRISBURG, March 22.

Col. John W. Forney:—Hall.

A. K. McCLURE.

Forney didn't halt.

—So decided in his temperance opinions is the Rev. Mr. Cooper, Presbyterian pastor of McConnellsville, Pa., that when the subscription books for his support were opened, he instructed the deacons as follows: To receive no money on subscription from families, any part of whose income is derived from the sale of intoxicating liquors; to mark all such subscriptions as paid, and charge the sum to his account; and if the amount allowed him as a salary could not be raised from other sources the salary might be reduced just as much as the subscriptions from those doubtful sources amounted to.

—The late Dr. Wisner of Ithaca, wishing to deter the young people of his flock from going to dancing assemblies, said to them; "My young friends, it is a good and safe rule, for a Christian never to go where his Master would not go. Suppose that Jesus Christ were now in Ithaca, as he was once in Samaria and Jerusalem. Suppose that you should meet him in the street, would you dare to say to him, 'Lord, there is a ball tonight at the Clinton House; won't you go?'" It is said that, as Dr. Wisner uttered this startling sentence, with a sharp glance of his piercing black eyes, and deepest solemnity of voice, a thrill went through every auditor. No one smiled. The thrust came home terribly.

—At Rolla, Missouri, recently during the pendency of a habeas corpus case in the court at that place, the Circuit Attorney, one Harris, in closing his remarks in opposition to allowing the defendent, a woman, to procure bail drew from his pocket and threw upon the table a roll of bills which, he said, had been given him to influence his action in the case. This incident, naturally enough greatly astonished the Judge, counsel and spectators. It is added that Harris said he was a poor man, but that no amount of money could swerve him from what he believed to be his official duty. Such incidents are rare, too rare, we may say, in even the best regulated communities.

—There is a droll story going through the newspapers of a deacon in Illinois who had no instrumental music in his soul, and who strenuously opposed, though in vain, the purchase of a church organ. Soon after, being asked to engage in prayer, he retorted with mordicant sarcasm: "Call on the machine! If it can sing the glory of God, it can pray too. Call on the machine!" Poor deacon! perhaps he didn't comprehend exactly how much of a "machine" he was showing himself to be. It hasn't probably dawned upon his mind that there may be quite as much formalism in rejection as in reception; and he never for a moment thought that the call upon himself to pray might be as purely mechanical as to the performance of the piped monster in the loft.

—After giving a very plausible theory of the origin of the term "Shyster," and the natural history of the "animal" known by that name, the Louisville Ledger describes him generally thus: The Shyster as a general thing, is not profound in his knowledge of law. His education is superficial. He begins practice when he begins study; and picks up his knowledge by absorption. He takes buffeting kindly and treasures up the teachings of experience, so that in time he becomes a pretty routine lawyer. His "best hold," however, is tricks, and they are tricks that are vain. If he should by any chance pick up a case of importance, involving a good round fee, he gets some solider lawyer to help him through it, and do the heavy work while he skirmishes for witnesses. He knows exactly where to find witnesses to prove character, to testify to particular facts having a bearing on the case, and to establish an alibi. He also knows how, with a little ready money, to secure the absence of a damaging witness on the other side.

—The Christian Union thinks that before applauding Olive Logan for refusing to lecture on Sunday evening, and condemning Anna Dickinson for taking the opposite course, it is worth while to take into the account the difference between the lectures delivered by the one and those delivered by the other: "If Olive Logan's are light and frivolous, she may well shrink from delivering them on the Sabbath. If Anna Dickinson feels that hers are profoundly serious and earnest, wherein does she differ from the preachers in our churches, in seizing the time of sacred leisure as fittest for pressing home her message to the hearts of men? But does she not lecture for pay? Is it not earning money on Sunday? Only those clergymen whose salary stops on the Sabbath day may cast this stonent Miss Dickinson. It is quite time that people should learn that the pulpit does not own the whole right of doing good, and that Sunday is not the monopoly of the Church.

—There was a contest; not long since, in the London School Board upon the question whether its meetings should be officially opened with prayer. Prof. Huxley protested that prayer was no part of the "business" for which the body was created, and was, therefore, an impertinence. The matter was compromised by a requisition asking the Chairman to set apart a room for devotional exercises, immediately proceeding the hour fixed for the meeting. He did so; but, when the time came for the first meeting, not one of the requisitionists was there to meet him. Comment is needless.

Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister.

Probably a dozen or more attempts have been made in England within the last half century to legalize marriage with a deceased wife's sister, and invariably with the same result. The measure usually prevails in the House of Commons, but in the House of Lords, where the influence of the Bench of Bishops is exerted against it, and the conservative element is in the ascendancy, it is decisively defeated. The subject has been once more before the British public, and a bill, legalizing such marriages recently passed the Lower House of Parliament, only to be defeated in the Upper House. This result was foreshadowed by the action of a meeting in the Conservative interest, in which a number of lords temporal and spiritual participated, recently held in London. The Chairman, Earl Percy, denounced the measure as contrary to Holy Scripture, contrary to the rule of the Church in all ages, and contrary to common sense and all right feeling; and he believed that if it should become a law, it would be productive of the worst effects both socially and morally. Another lord showed that the present law against such marriages had been the law of England for a thousand years, and the Bishop of Winchester, familiarly known in England as "Soapy Samuel," declared that if there was no law of affinity to restrain a man from marrying his wife's sister, the law of consanguinity did not prevent him from marrying his own daughter; and he pronounced it to be a high crime and misdemeanor for any one even to mention in terms of advocacy such a shameful act. He adjured the English people to reject the proposal as one tainted with impurity, and which would sap the foundations of morality and public decency.

In the United States, where a distinction has been made between marriages of kindred and those of mere affinity, such language seems extravagant, if not absolutely ludicrous. No law here prevents a man from marrying his deceased wife's sister, and such marriages do in fact take place, though by no means frequently. But the terrible results anticipated by the English alarmists have not followed. The purity of domestic life has in no appreciable degree been sullied, and it is within the experience of almost any one that the infant children of a deceased wife have cared for, as they perhaps could not otherwise have been, by her sister succeeding as their mother. Not only has the tone of society not been lowered by the celebration of such marriages, but there is reason to believe that domestic happiness would be promoted if they could oftener occur. Widowers, with or without families of young children, usually, however, incline to matrimonial alliances in a different direction from their first venture. Some general law of change perhaps influences them, or they are supposed, for reasons similar to those adduced by conservative Englishmen, to marrying their sister-in-law. But the significant facts are that in a country which legalizes marriages with a deceased wife's sister they are not frequent, the basis of social life has not been unsettled, and public morals are as pure and public decency as strictly enforced as in England. The subject is one which may well be left to individual tastes and temperaments. If the law should ever be changed in England, a natural rule of selection which is superior to Parliamentary enactments will in all probability prevent there, as it has in America, the frequent occurrence of marriages which so shock the feelings of hereditary British legislators.—*N. A Chinese Wedding.

A gentleman in China writes an interesting account of the marriage of Mr. Charles Marshall. This young gentleman is a native Chinaman, but was brought to this country in his boyhood, and was a member of the "Church of the Strangers" in New York. He returned to China two years ago, is preaching and teaching in Soo-chow, and is supported by the Sunday School of Dr. Deems' Church. The following is an extract from the letter:

I left home on the 8th, about 10 o'clock a. m., in company with Charles and his bride. We are not, however, on the same boat. We have been two days together, but I have not yet seen her face, it being the Chinese custom for the bride to keep herself very close and concealed from view. Charles was married on the 20th of November, in Shanghai, to a Christian young lady of the Episcopal Church. They were married in the Episcopal Church about candle-light. The church was crowded to overflowing. The ladies were dressed in the richest attire, beautifully embroidered. Their head-dresses were filled with jewels, gold and silver ornaments, and small, tinkling bells hung around in great profusion. The bride was brought into the church in a handsome sedan chair, covered with red cloth, and her face veiled with red, so that no one could see. She was then led to the altar by two old ladies, the bridesmaids following, and the bridegroom meeting her at the altar. When we reached the native brother's house, where a bountiful supply of good things were waiting us, the vail was lifted, and our friend Charles looked as though he was electrified, for he had never seen her face before. It is the custom of the Chinese that the bride shall not be allowed to speak for three days, and all she eats has to be put into her mouth by the bridesmaids. She is not allowed to use her hands to do anything for three days, and she is not allowed to sleep during that time, except what she can get by leaning her head upon the table or on the side of the bed. But the worst and strangest part is to come. From the first day of their marriage day and night, there is not a moment's peace in the bride's chamber. All invited guests are allowed to go in at any time, day or night, and make as much noise as they like, to prevent either party getting any rest. Neither bride nor groom can take any rest, for they are at the mercy of those who are bidden to the feast.

—George Emerson, an Englishman residing in Exeter, having lived a bachelor until he was nearly 50, conceived the idea of marrying a Chinese woman, and accordingly set sail from Liverpool for Canton. There he selected a girl of 18; gave her father £20 for her, was wedded on the spot, and reembarked for home. He quarreled violently with his wife before reaching land, and was with difficulty prevented from throwing her overboard. He now offers to dispose of his Chinese connubial investment at less than half price.

—The National Baptist (Philadelphia) publishes this extract of a letter from a minister in that State to the editor: "A meeting has been in progress at——for over five weeks. I did all the preaching, otherwise being assisted by the Rev. L. J. Christ (Lord Jesus Christ). Irreverence like this from a man calling himself a Christian minister is so shocking as to be almost incredible.

Knocking a man down in court is an expensive luxury in St. Louis. The marshal of that city has sued James J. McBride, an attorney, for $5,000 for prostrating him with a loaded cane during the progress of a trial. In New York you can kill 20 men for much less money.

—Two brothers named Smallfubs, residing near Cold Water, Mich., married, last week, Mary Pride and Helen Jewett, and liking those patronymics so much better than their own, adopted them at the time of the ceremony. Smallfubs, it must be confessed, is not a very desirable name to begin the honeymoon with.

Forty-Second Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

SENATE, March 25.—Mr. Sumner offered a resolution calling for information as to the cost of keeping our fleet in San Domingo waters since the pertaining of negotiations. After delivering remarks in relation to the deficiency appropriation bill was taken up, amended and passed.

The House was not in session.

SENATE, March 27.—The great feature was an elaborate speech from Senator Sumner, on San Domingo affairs. The chamber was crowded to its utmost capacity, and his speech was the master effort of the session. Senator Morton attempted a reply, but signally failed in his effort to ward off the effect of Mr. Sumner's stubborn facts.

HOUSE.—Numerous bills and resolutions were presented and offered. Mr. Hubbard offered a series of resolutions declaratory of what the financial policy of the government should be; that taxes should be for revenue only, and not for the benefit of class interests at the general expense; that economy requires that there should be raised only $250,000,000 of revenue, including interest, and $25,000,000 towards paying the principal of the public debt, and that in case the Committee of Ways and Means shall not be appointed at the present session, a special Committee of Seven shall be appointed, to report a reform of revenue tariff, without discrimination in favor of particular interests. The House, by a vote of fifty-two against eighty-three refused to second the demand for the previous question. They were referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, as soon as that Committee shall be appointed. The House then adjourned to listen to Mr. Sumner's great speech.

SENATE, March 28.—Mr. Sumner presented a petition for a Congress of Nations, where all questions between nations may be settled without the arbitrament of the sword. He offered a resolution requiring the Committee on the District of Columbia to consider what remedy may be devised to prevent people of color from being treated disrespectfully on board steamers in the Chesepeake, as Fred Douglass had been on his way from Acquia creek to Washington. After some talk on Ku-Klux, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The select Committee to whom the President's message had been referred, reported a bill to enforce the 14th Amendment to the Constitution, which was discussed until the hour of adjournment.

SENATE, March 29.—The Senate took up the resolution to amend the order of business so that any bill on the South passed by the House may be considered at the present session, and discussed it during the morning hour. The San Domingo resolutions of Mr. Sumner were discussed at great length, and finally tabled by a vote of 39 to 16.

HOUSE.—The House resumed the consideration of the bill to enforce the 14th Amendment, and it was discussed until the hour of adjournment.

SENATE, March 30.—The consideration of Mr. Anthony's amendment to the order of business, to allow the consideration of any bill for the South passed by the House of Representatives, was resumed, and after considerable debate, was adopted. The resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to bring in a bill relative to Ku Klux outrages was then taken up and discussed until adjournment.

HOUSE.—The House passed the Senate bill granting to Phœbe Scofield a pension of $8 per month from June 15, 1870, she being at that time 100 years old and the widow of a revolutionary soldier. The bill reported from the Committee to suppress outrages in the South, was then taken up and discussed until adjournment. Members indulged freely in personalities, and the debate was exciting. Davis and Butler had a sharp staring encounter, in the Senate.

Senate March 31. The debate on Sherman's resolution directing the Judiciary Committee to bring in a bill in favor of legislating on Ku-Klux outrages occupied the entire day. Adjourned till Tuesday.

HOUSE.—A resolution was adopted calling for the estimate of cost of paper for bank note printing. The name of the ship Stover was changed to Hamilton Fish, in compliment to Secretary Fish. The Senate agreed to hold evening sessions for debate on Ku-Klux measures. The day was spent in arguing the bill to enforce the 14th Amendment.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY IN PHILADELPHIA.

A Man Shoots his Wife in Cold Blood, and Then Kills Himself.

Another of those horrible affairs which it appears must happen occasionally and which not only astounds but horrifies the whole community, occurred on Saturday of last week.

At a boarding-house kept by Mrs. Miller, at No. 449 North Fifth street, there had been residing since last fall, a young man named John H. Murray and his wife. He (so far as our information goes) was industrious, and his wife an excellent, loving women. At the time he engaged board he was a conductor on a passenger railway, and endured the usual discharges and changes of employment peculiar to these overworked employees.

Within a few weeks he was discharged, and, perhaps to avoid expense, about two weeks ago he sent his wife to New York. During her absence she regularly corresponded with him until a few days since, when she ceased writing. This worried him; but he was raised to a pitch of indignation when he was informed by an officious friend that she was in the city, and was in company with a man in a house on Walnut street. On Friday afternoon he called at the house and persuaded his wife to accompany him to his boarding-house. On entering the house his first salute was, "Mary have you come back and all will now be well."

The wife led the way up stairs and he followed her. In about five minutes after reports of a pistol were heard by Mrs. Miller in rapid succession, and immediately after the voice of Murray was heard on the stairs calling to the landlady for "God's sake to come up!" She ran up quickly and when she entered the room she found Mrs. Murray extended on the bed and the husband by her side. After shooting his wife and himself he had succeeded in reaching the second floor, and then had strength enough to get back to the bed and throw himself by the side of the murdered women.

A horrible sight was presented to those who first entered the room—a pleasant third-story room, opening to the west, comfortably furnished. Against the north wall the bed, on which laid the wife dead, and beside her the husband dying. She had evidently after the fatal shot sat on the bed and then fell over on her back. He was writhing in pain, and during the few moments of rest he had turned over to his wife and caressed her, smoothing her face and moaning out his sorrow for the frightful deed he had committed.

Mrs. Murray was well and comfortably dressed; a black alpaca skirt and a sacque of the same material was her outer attire. She laid on the bed apparently as innocently and happily as if she were asleep. The upper portion of her chemise was stained with blood, and a shot through the lungs her last breathings had ejected blood upon her chin and cheeks to such an extent as to create the idea that she had been shot in the mouth. She had been shot three times—twice in the back, and again in the breast immediately below the collar bone.

The shots in the back, round were so close that her chemise was burned and blackened by the explosion. Murray had shot himself through the left lung. The internal hemorrhage gave him great agony. Between the paroxysms of his pain he would turn to his wife, and smooth her face, and caress her. Nothing could be obtained from him as to the cause of the tragedy. He expressed his sorrow for what he had done, but said nothing against his wife, and manfully refused all information. Immediately after the murder was discovered Murray requested the presence of the clergyman of the church to which he belonged, and the last rites of the church were administered to him. He was taken from the house to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he died about 12 A. M. on Sunday.

Mrs. Murray is about twenty-one years of age. Her maiden name was Fredericks, and her parents reside, it is said, in Virginia. Her appearance as she laid upon the bed was as if just returning from a walk, dressed and gloved, and her wealth of hair streaming over the snowy coverlid was horribly pathetic.

The supposed cause of this tragedy was jealousy, but it was possible that Murray, out of work, and tired of this battle with the world, was moved by these conditions rather than by any suspicion of his wife. Whatever the matter may have been, death covers all.

The Western Fruit Crop—The Reported Failure of the Great Illinois Farmer.

CHICAGO, March 23.—The Des Moines (Iowa) Register was yesterday informed by several leading horticulturalists in different portions of that State that fruit trees have passed through the winter in fine order, and that there are now the most flattering indications that the coming crop will be the largest in the history of the State. The only danger now lies in sudden cold weather.

A special from Jacksonville gives the following facts about the reported failure of John Alexander, the Illinois cattle king. During 1870 he was a large loser in cattle speculations. Being cramped for funds, he determined to sell the Broadlands farm, containing 26,000 acres, and appointed agents to make the sale, after an offer of $600,000 made for Broadlands by a Canadian, named Hogle, who failed to come to time.

Meantime Mr. Alexander became more deeply embarrassed, and his creditors becoming impatient, he has appointed two leading citizens of Jacksonville and one of Nemaid county to sell so much of his property as will pay his creditors. To this action he has the consent of his creditors. Two years' time is given by them.

—Allen McClean, a young Kentuckian, residing in Campbell county, had been quite dissipated, but "got religion" at a Methodist revival, and regarding himself as better prepared to die than he ever would be again, he went to the Licking River, and, after singing, "I want to be an angel," leaped into the stream and drowned himself.

A Western Liquor Law.

Something of a novel experiment is being tried in Ohio, which seems to be working better for the shutting up of liquor saloons than anything yet tried. The law provides that "every husband, wife, child, parent, guardian, employer or other person who shall be injured in person, property, or means of support by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of such intoxication, shall have a right of action against both the person who sold the liquor and the landlord who owns the premises on which the sale was made." The constitutionality of the law has been affirmed, and there is no loophole of escape there for the saloon keepers; and within the last two or three weeks several actions against them have resulted in the recovery of damages from their indirect victims. One lady—the widow of a physician—obtained a verdict of $5,000 against a rum seller who had supplied her husband with the liquor that killed him; another was awarded $3,000 for the loss of a son under a similar state of facts; while in a large number of instances that have very lately transpired various smaller verdicts have been recovered by the friends of those who have fallen into a drunkard's grave. The law further provides that any fine imposed upon a saloon keeper or house-owner, or any judgment obtained in a civil suit instituted under the above mentioned circumstances, shall become a lien upon the premises until fully discharged, and that in case of default said premises shall be sold at sheriff's sale. So that every facility is given to the several plaintiffs to prosecute their claims to a successful termination, and no hole left for the escape of the offender. The scheme thus sketched has only been in operation for a few months, but the most beneficial results have marked its progress; indeed, Ohioans in urging other Legislatures to follow their example, claim that the law is the most effective one ever conceived, and is attended by the greatest amount of fear and trembling by those engaged in the liquor traffic.

Pistol Duel in a School.

Last Saturday, in a crowded school house in Sandusky township, three miles east of Annapolis, at the closing of a school, a duel was fought with pistols. James McCasky and U. S. Greene had cultivated a grudge, and both had been carrying loaded pistols. They met in the school house, and to the casual observer nothing serious was to be apprehended. After the examination of a class, the teacher gave permission to the spectators to ask questions to test the proficiency of the pupils. U. S. Green began asking questions, and McCasky drew his pistol and fired. Five or six shots were fired, one of the parties receiving a severe flesh wound. It is wonderful, that so many shots were fired in a room crowded with men, women, and children, and so little injury done. One little girl seeing how the pistols were pointed, jumped away from her seat, which immediately afterward was pierced with two bullets. One of the shots blackened the teacher's face. Mr. Greene is in jail, and Mr. McCasky is under recognizance in $1,500.—Bucyrus (O.) Forum, March 21.

—The Forest "Republican" says: The river is too low now to raft, but a large amount of square timber is being accumulated at the mouth of the Tionesta by means of pound frenches, waiting for the next rise, which is confidently expected within a week or two.

—A man by the name of David Bates, living on Comals Hill, in Sharon, was seen to drop on the pavement in front of Dr. Barber's office about twelve o'clock on the 24th inst. He was immediately carried into the office; but was dead before anything could be done for him.

—The dwelling house of Donald St George Frazier, Esq., near Saxton, Bedford county, was entirely consumed by fire on last Thursday. The inmates of the house were sitting at the dinner table, unconscious of the presence of the devouring element, when they were first aroused by their neighbors giving the alarm of "fire." The greater portion of the furniture was saved. A large New Foundland dog, belonging to Mr. Frasier, is said to have accomplished wonders in carrying out articles of value belonging to the house. The fire is supposed to have originated from a spark falling upon the roof from the stove-pipe. The loss is estimated at $4,000. No insurance.

—A letter writer from Chicago claims to have discovered that four out of five of its most prosperous citizens fall in business every seven years, and that failure invariably increases both their capital and their success. This is certainly creditable to the enterprise and recuperative power of Chicago.

—Two brothers in Providence, living about 500 feet apart, have established a communication between their houses through an ordinary gas-pipe, laid under-ground and terminating in their front halls. The talking is done by means of a whistle, which is capable of making a variety of sounds, the meaning of which is determined to previous arrangement.

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHŒA, or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., also, CONSUMPTION, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope only 6 cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, postpaid on receipt of six cents or two post stamps.

Colored Candles.—Those of our readers who are in the habit of indulging their children with candles, should bear in mind, that most of the colored candles are poisonous. The New York Health Department, recently, with a view to the detection of poisonous ingredients, examined a large variety of them. They report that the red coloring matters were found to be either carmine or aniline red, both harmless. Greens were found also to be harmless although the public is recommended to beware of highly colored green candles; but one half the yellows examined were found colored with poison, generally chromate of lead or gamboge. Among the flavoring ingredients it was found that oil of peppermint is often adulterated with oil of turpentine and that the other flavors are generally artificial—others, many of which are considered injurious.

About Applications for License to Sell Liquors.—We notice that the License Board of Allegheny county have ordered the publication in the papers, the names of all applicants for license, to sell intoxicating liquors, with the names of their "indorsers" and bondsmen. All remonstrances are to be laid before this license board. The publication of the names of the indorsers is a good idea, and we would be much gratified to see it adopted in this county. A law, we presume, to that end, would be necessary. But if we had it, we apprehend that any number of gentlemen who are now in the "indorsing" business, would feel like giving it up, if the certainty of their names appearing in the public papers, in that connection, stared them in the face. Why don't the temperance men of this county, move in that direction? If the indorsement of men of standing can thus be prevented, the indorsement of others would likely have little or no weight with the courts.

HARDWARE AND CUTLERY.—Messrs. Lane Bros., corner Liberty and Sixth streets, (late St. Clair street), having disposed of all their old stock, damaged by the late fire, have opened for the spring trade the largest and most complete assortment of Hardware and Cutlery ever offered in Pittsburgh.

This house, established in 1833, is the oldest in the city, and purchasers may depend upon their selections being of the best quality. They offer liberal inducements to the country Jobbing Trade.

BEAVER DRUG STORE.—We have the pleasure of informing our readers today, that Mr. Hugo Andriessen has removed his popular "Beaver Drug Store" to the corner of Third street and Diamond, opposite the Radical Building. He has fitted it up in the most attractive style, and offers for sale an entirely new, most complete and carefully selected stock of Pure Drugs and Medicines, Chemicals, Paints, Oils and Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Perfumery, Toilet articles, &c., &c., &c. In compounding of Physicians' Prescriptions Mr. Andriessen certainly has no superior having a theoretical and practical experience of eight years. He will continue to be manufacturers' agent for Fahnestock, Haslett & Schwartz's strictly Pure White Lead. Mr. Arthur Andriessen, we are glad to learn, will remain in charge of the Confectionery Department. We doubt not that the "Beaver Drug Store," in its present central location, will meet with the same success as formerly, and we invite the reader to call and examine for himself. [apr5;1w.

THE SPRAGUE MOWER.—The attention of Farmers and others is directed to the card of Messrs. Spratt, Johnston & Co., Pittsburgh, Pa. This highly responsible house has now for sale the Sprague Mower. It is compact and simple in construction, lightest draft in the country, and has given general satisfaction to all who have used it.

By all means examine the Sprague Mower, before purchasing any other.

School Room Troubles.—A Miss Capron who is teaching a school in Lincoln tp., Allegheny county, got into trouble last week. She had occasion, in her judgment, to correct one of her scholars, James McCracken, a boy about twelve years of age. While she was punishing him he turned his face in such a position as to receive a stroke across the lips, which was not intended. Miss Capron, as soon as school was dismissed, accompanied the boy to his foster father, David McCracken, and explained why she had punished him, and how he had received the injury to the lip. Mr. McCracken would not accept the explanation as satisfactory, and a few days after called a meeting of the School Board to consider the matter. The Board, however, after hearing his statement, regarded the case as "too trifling for action," and dismissed the complaint. This, it was thought, would have ended the case; but not so. On Thursday last the mother of the boy went up from her home to the school house, and having assembled a few female friends at a convenient distance, called Miss Capron out and beat her with some rods which she had plaited together for the purpose. Legal proceedings have been commenced by Miss Capron against all the parties concerned in the assault upon her, and the case is one which is likely to come before the Courts for settlement.

Letter.

—The Rev. W. H. Locke will discuss "The True and the False Idea of a Gentleman," in the M. E. Church of this place, Thursday evening, 13th inst. This lecture will be given under the auspices of the Ladies Working Society, and those who have had the pleasure of listening to the gentleman on the platform, assure us that we may expect a treat.

Lecture in Bridgewater.

—James H. Hopkins, esq., of Pittsburgh, will deliver a lecture in the Presbyterian Church in Bridgewater, on next Friday evening, April 7th, at 7 o'clock. Subject: Christian Knighthood. Admittance 25 cents; proceeds to be applied to the benefit of the Masonic Home for widows and orphans. The purpose of the lecture and the well known ability of the lecturer should secure a crowded house.

A Law Library in Beaver.

—An act establishing a library in Beaver has been passed by the Legislature and approved by the Governor. We have not seen the act but are informed that it requires the county commissioners to appropriate $1,500 for the purchase of books, and to fit up a suitable room in the Court House to keep them in, and after that all the money from fines, forfeited recognizances, amusements &c., &c., which has heretofore gone into the county treasury, is to be used to replenish the library referred to.

Parents will bear in mind the opening of the Seminary and Institute this week, where both sexes are received. We understand its prospects are deservedly flattering. Prof. Beuter and Mrs. Taylor should receive large additions to their music class.

How it is Done.

Below we give, for the information and protection of our readers, a copy of the patent right note which has been extensively used in Ohio and other States to swindle farmers and others. We will suppose A. Stone to be agent for a seeding machine, and John Smith to be an honest farmer, whom A. Stone induces to act as his agent. Good terms are offered, the farmer being offered all the profit on the seeding machines, except that, after he has sold $375 worth of seeders, he is to remit ten dollars to the principal agent. Then a note similar to the following is produced and signed by the unsuspecting farmer:

One year after date I promise to pay A. Stone or order, Two Hundred and Seventy-Five Dollars for value received, at ten per cent. per annum, said ten dollars when due is payable at Manchester, Iowa.

Witness: John Doe. JOHN SMITH, Agent for A. Stone. Manchester, Iowa, Feb. 15th, 1871. beaver ten dollars when I sell by worth of Seeding Machines

On its face this purports to be a common contract note, only conditionally payable, and which no third party would ever purchase. But when the swindler gets the note safe in his own hands, he cuts it in two at the vacant space that will be seen running perpendicularly thro' the document just after the word "or," whereby the left end of it becomes a note of hand, which the rascal sells at what over price he can get, and leaves the swindled farmer and the innocent purchaser of the note to settle the matter as best they may.

A Faithless Wife—A Business Husband.—On last Saturday morning one week ago, a woman, who, with her husband, resided near the mouth of Yellow Creek, in Columbiana county, Ohio, eloped with one of her boarders. In the evening the forsaken husband put in an appearance at his home, and was not slow in comprehending the whole situation. On the following day (Sunday) he put his goods up at auction, and on Monday morning left on the train for Pittsburgh in search of the "festive couple." Himself and wife had only been married six months, and, as he was in industrious, prudent man, they had been getting along well financially speaking. At last accounts, he had not overtaken his faithless wife, (and her paramour.

Pensions to Soldiers of 1812.

The following is the text of the Act granting pensions to soldiers and sailors of the war of 1812, and the widows of deceased soldiers:

BE it enacted" &c., That the Secretary be and he is hereby authorized and required to place on the pension roll the surviving officers and enlisted and drafted men, including militia and volunteers, of the military and naval service of the United States in the war of 1812 who served for a period of sixty days, and to the widows of those who have died who were married prior to the treaty of peace (December 24, 1814,) which terminated said war. Also to such officers and soldiers who served less than sixty days who have been personally named in any resolution of Congress for any specific service in said war.

Under this act three classes of claims will arise:

1st. Of officers, soldiers and sailors who served for sixty days, who have never been pensioned for a disability incurred in the service of the United States. These will be entitled to a full pension of eight dollars per month, from February 14, 1871.

2d. Of officers, soldiers and sailors who served for sixty days, but who are in receipt of a pension for a disability incurred in the service of the United States. These will be entitled to an increase of their pension to eight dollars per month, from February 14, 1871.

3d. Of widows of officers, soldiers and sailors who served sixty days, who were married to the soldier prior to the treaty of peace which terminated said war (Dec. 24, 1814,) and "who have not since remarried." These will be entitled to eight dollars per month, from February 14, 1871.

If the term of service was less than sixty days there is no claim for pension under this act, unless the person who served has been personally mentioned in a resolution of Congress for some specific service in said war, in which case he or his widow is entitled to the same benefits under its provisions as though he had served for the full period of sixty days.

An honorable discharge in all cases is necessary.

Declarations of these claimants must be made before a court of record, or before some officer thereof having custody of its seal, said officer being by authorized and empowered to administer and certify any oath or affirmation relating to any pension or application therefor.

The claimant's identity and loyalty must be proven by two witnesses, certified by the judicial officer to be respectable and credible, who are present and witness the signature of the declarant, and certify to his identity and loyalty under oath or affirmation.

The declaration must recite the name, age, and residence of the claimant; whether married or unmarried; that the term of service was the full period of sixty days; or that he has been mentioned in a resolution of Congress, giving date of resolution, the place and time of enlistment and discharge; and the company, regiment, brigade and division in which he served; the places, capacity and manner of service, and his participation in connection with any historical event of the war, are particularly desired to be mentioned. The declaration must also contain the following oath or affirmation:

"That I; [if a widow, "That neither I, nor my said husband;] at no time during the late rebellion against the authority of the United States, adhered to the cause of the enemies of his Government, giving them aid and comfort, or exercised the functions of any office, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States, and that I will support the constitution of the United States."

WHITEWASHING.—The well-known Barber of Bridgewater, and no less renowned and skillful whitewasher—Mr. Banks—desires us to make known to the public that he holds himself in readiness to fill all orders for whitewashing during this Spring season of house-cleaning and repairing. It would be supererrogatory to say he understands his business in that line. The community of Bridgewater, Beaver and Rochester are acquainted with his merits, Mr. John Williams, whose tonsorial ability is well-known, will continue to carry on the Barber Shop, opposite Smith's Drug Store. apr5;2w.

Jelly, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Washington, New Jersey, and for a long time a resident of of this county, seems to be quite popular with his people as we learn from the Star of that village. Mr. Jelly has been granted a short "leave of absence" by his congregation, and will in the meantime make a visit to Philadelphia, Easton, Baltimore and Washington, D. C., for the purpose of recruiting his his health, which for some time past has been impaired.

Pennsylvania Legislature.

SENATE, March 27.—Several ineffectual attempts were made to take up House bills; when the bill to introduce committee voting came up; but pending the discussion upon it the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—Very many private bills were introduced, but none of material interest. No bills were passed.

SENATE, March 28.—Mr. Baton presented a petition of citizens of New Brighton for prohibitory liquor law. Also, a joint resolution for a special session in August next, to consider the Report of the Civil Code Commissioners. Many resolutions were introduced; and one adopted instructing the Finance Committee to investigate the recent defalcation of the Secretary of the Western House of Refuge.

HOUSE.—A bill passed transferring certain counties from the eastern to the Western Penitentiary district. A number of private bills were passed.

SENATE, March 29.—Senate refused to take up any House bills; but was prevailed upon to confirm several military nominations made by the Governor. The bill to introduce cumulative voting in borough elections, passed and went to the House.

HOUSE.—The Committee on apportionment reported a bill. The Senate bill to restore spring elections passed. Nothing farther of general interest. The following is the Republican apportionment bill:

SENATE, March 30.—Among the bills presented were; One, providing that in suits against telegraph companies, service of summons on any operator of the company in the county in which suit is brought shall be sufficient; One authorizing common carriers and others to sell goods, wares and merchandise unclaimed, or upon which they have a lein; and one, securing to married women their seperate earnings. Adjourned till Tuesday morning.

HOUSE.—The bill compensating persons injured in person or property by sale or giving liquors by suit for damages was discussed and defeated. The bill for preventing the sale of intoxicating drinks on election day, was so amended as not to apply after closing the polls, and passed. It punishes by fine and imprisonment. The Republican apportionment bill passed to second reading.

SENATE, March 31st.—The Senate was not in session.

HOUSE.—The House devoted its whole time to the Republican Apportionment bill, which passed finally by a party vote, and will go to the Senate as reported by the House Committee on Apportionment without amendment. The Democrats alleged openly that the Senate would refuse to adjourn till a satisfactory bill was passed. The Republicans, in response, asserted they would carry a bill fair to them, or be satisfied till next election with the apportionment of 1864. The Senate and House are certainly at a dead lock on this question. The House adjourned till Tuesday morning.

The Following card appears in last week's Lawrence Journal:

FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS:—You are hereby notified that since last court, we have been engaged in and continuing the business of making drunkards, paupers, and beggars. I will furnish you with liquors that will excite you to robbery and blackballed; I will for a small amount undertake on short notice, and without delay, to prepare soon for the Poor Houses, the Prison and the Gallows. I will warrant my liquors to deprive some of life, many of reason, property and peace. I will cause the rising generation to grow up in ignorance, and be a nuisance to this nation. If any one should ask what is document I have to bring such misery upon the neighbors, my reply is "greenbacks." All can see it is profitable business. Some temperance men, and professing Christians, give it countenance, and besides I live in the land of Liberty and have a license to abuse as much men's lives, and ruin their souls. So, come one, come all. I pledge myself do all I herein promise.

SELECT MISCELLANY

HOE OUT YOUR ROW.

BY MRS. M'CONAUGHY

The youngest son stood with his fair bride upon the threshold of the old farmhouse. He was the last of four boys who had gone forth from that humble roof to work their way up manfully to a place of honor and usefulness in the world. Perhaps there was a little dimness in the old man's eye, and may be a little tremor in his voice as he spoke the farewell words. But he took from the old side-cupboard his parting gift; a bright, new hoe—and as he placed it in the hand of the youth, the accompanying admonition sounded cheerfully on his ear, "Hoe out your row."

It was the fourth time a similar presentation had been made in the old homestead.

"Everybody will find his row to hoe in this world, George—and sometimes it is a mighty tough one; but it is only cowards that shirk it. Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might,' and never forget to look up."

The old man wrung the hand of his son, and stooped down to kiss the cheek of his fair, new daughter; while mother busied herself with the dozen "last things," which every one but a mother forgets. The lingering farewells were said at last, and the old coach rolled away with the two hopeful, sunny hearts just entering life's bright and beautiful summer.

The old homestead seemed deserted and drear as a last year's nest. The aged pair sat down by their own hearthstone alone as when they began life together. How these old walls had rung to the sound of childhood's mirth, and childhood's step, and in later years had echoed with the tread of manly feet. Now they must live more in the buried past.

But to George and Ellen life seemed all one bright future, with the rainbow of hope arching all their plans and projects.

Their Western home was an humble one, and plenty of work for willing hands within it. The young farmer's chief capital was his strong arm and stout heart, and the sound working-day principles he had been taught from childhood. Sometimes he grew discouraged at the prospect of paying for the place he worked—but he was sure to meet with hearty encouragement and words of cheer from Ellen; a glance, too, at the parting gift of his father, as it stood on the mantel in the family room, was as good as a sermon any day. There it stood very ready to give encouragement or admonition, as the case might be. Strangers might think it a curious ornament for a chimney-piece, but it was soon regarded as one of the household treasures. Dust nor rust were never suffered to mar its brightness.

"Ellen, it is no use trying," said George, one evening, quite despondingly, as he turned away from some figures he had been making on a scrap of paper, "I can't make out the payment this week, and I may as well give it up."

Ellen looked up cheerfully from her work and nodded toward the mantle.

"I have hoed and hoed, but this row is too much for me. The wool will pay next installment, and the crops the next; but where this fifty dollars is to come from, that I need in addition to what I can make out, is more than I can see."

"Sell the cow, George," advised Ellen; "you were offered sixty dollars for her, you know."

"But what can we do for butter, and cream in our coffee, and all that?"

"Do without for a time, dear. A home is a great deal more important to us now than any table luxury. Besides, you shall not suffer. These little self-denials, you know, are almost unavoidable, if we would fairly hoe out our roe."

George, like a sensible man, took his wife's advice; and the satisfaction she felt, as he paid down the money promptly and took his receipt, far exceeded that which any table enjoyment could afford him.

Ellen ransacked her memory for economical sauces and gravies, to take the place of old Debby's golden butter and yellow cream, and she never forgot to put a well-beaten egg into the pot of coffee, so improving its richness that George scarcely missed the favorite luxury.

Steadily onward he hoed his row until the place was all his own. The old home had put on a new face outdoors and in. There were shrubs and rosebushes in abundance in the once tangled and briar-grown dooryard, and a fine young orchard was blossoming on the sunny slope toward the south.

There were files of agricultural papers on the broad shelf of the little library, and a choice selection of miscellaneous books above them. There were little tasteful appointments here and there, about the cheerful sitting-room, but the bright hoe was never displaced by any gem or crystal. The pretty shell-framed pictures might look down upon it, if they chose; it could not be looked out of countenance.

George was respected and known by all his neighbors, and the stranger, who shared both for a night the generous hospitality of the broad hearthstone, wept away to speak, years after, of the pleasant hours he spent there, and the kindly attentions of the gentle wife, whose wide heart took in every suffering, sorrowing one of earth. The blessing of the Lord was upon that household, and it is that alone "which maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it."

Years sped apace, when one ruddy October, a circular autograph letter went round the circle of brothers, bidding them all come to the golden wedding. And the call gathered them in from their distant homes.

There was a racket of merry, youthful voices, as the grandchildren romped through the old halls; but grandfather's face was brimful of smiles; and grandma's pet and name sake, gentle dignified Grace, took the reins of government into her hands, so all moved on harmoniously, relieving mothers of all care and leaving them to chat to their hearts' content.

Carrie was the daugher-in-law who lived nearest home, so the care of the feast fell upon her. "Grandma must not stir from her rocking-chair" until all was upon the table. Indeed, it would be hard for her to accomplish much with so many little run-a-ways under her feet all the time, whose manifold perfections must continually be observed and commented on.

The evening lamp was lighted, and a little fire was burning in the open fire-place, as all were seated in the old home-room.

William the eldest born, stepped forth from the little group, and advancing to his gray-haired father, said:

"It is twenty-two years since the first of us went forth from this roof to make his way in the world. As each, in turn, you presented to him a bright new hoe, with the injunction, 'Hoe out your row.' How well we have followed your directions and the lessons of industry, perseverance, Christian integrity, and self-denial, you have always taught by your words and by your life, it remains for you to judge. As a token that we have not forgotten your teachings, in the name of my brothers and myself, I present this hoe to you," and with a bow he laid it down upon the little round stand before him.

The old man dropped his head, and the thin hairs fell about his temples, as he simply said, with a choking voice.

"God bless the boys!"

"Mother," said Ralph, advancing to her side, "we all know that you would not desire any gifts of jewels and golden ornaments, such as are common on these occasions. But we thought the contents of this little box might add some comforts to your lives, which we should delight to bestow, if we were not so widely separated." He placed in her hands, a beautiful gilt casket, containing four of the broadest pieces mintturning out, with a liberal sprinkling of smaller yellow drops, from the little grandchildren.

"Now father," said Dominie Ned, as he walked up to the stand, "I must give you my wedding present;" and he laid before him, his beautiful copy of the Testament and Psalms, printed in very large, clear type, so grateful to the failing sight of age. In bright gilt letters on the side, were stamped these words:

Now, perhaps, we had better sing our evening hymn; and after worship, let the little ones tramp off to bed."

The patriarch knelt among his flock, and the prayer, from his full heart, for God's blessings upon them, was as if he had entered within the veil. There were tears on many cheeks when they rose, and a subdued tone ran even in the "good-nights" of the merry children.

Then all drew up about the fire, and told over the tales of other days.

William told how he had hoed out a pretty hard row in the new place, where he had sought to establish himself as a physician. But, after due waiting, the "first patient" came at last, and the second, and so on, until now, he was "the old physician" of the place, with two young men in the office with him.

Dominie Ned, (otherwise Rev. Edward Kent,) detailed some of the "Shady Side" experiences of his first charge; but they were pleasantly relieved by the many "Sunny Side" incidents his wife took care to suggest as he went along.

George and Ralph compared farm-notes, and altogether, the evening passed as only such a gathering, by such a hearth-stone, ever can. It is only such training that can produce such results.

If you wish your boys and girls to grow up useful, honorable, and happy, teach them faithfully "to hoe out their row."

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

BY MARK TWAIN.

"DISCARDED LOVER."—"I loved, and still love, the beautiful Edwitha Howard, and intended to marry her. Yet, during my temporary absence at Rabicia, last week, alas! she married Jones. Is my happiness to be thus blasted for life? Have I no redress?"

Of course you have. All the law written and unwritten, is on your side. The intention and not the act constitutes crime—in other words, constitutes the deed. If you call your bosom friend a fool, and intend it for an insult, it is an insult; but if you do it playfully, and meaning no insult, it is not an insult. If you discharge a pistol accidentally, and kill a man, you can go free, for you have done no murder; but if you try to kill a man, and manifestly intend to kill him, but fail utterly to do it, the law still holds that the intention constituted the crime, and you are guilty of murder. Ergo, if you had married Edwitha accidentally, and without really intending to do it, you would not actually be married to her at all, because the act of marriage could not be complete without the intention. and Ergo, in the strict spirit of the law, since you deliberately intended to marry Edwitha, and didn't do it, you are married to her all the same—because, as I said before, the intention constitutes the crime. It is as clear as day that Edwitha is your wife, and your redress lies in taking a club and mutilating Jones with it as much as you can. Any man has a right to protect his own wife from the advances of other men. But you have another alternative—you were married to Edwitha first, because of your deliberate intention, and now you can prosecute her for bigamy, in subsequently marrying Jones. But there is another phase in this complicated case: You intended to marry Edwitha, and consequently, according to law she is your wife—there's no getting around that; but she didn't marry you, and if she never intended to marry you, you are not her husband, of course. Ergo, in marrying Jones, she was guilty of bigamy, because she was the wife of another man at the time; which is all very well as far as it goes—but then, don't you see, she had no other husband when she married Jones, and consequently she was not guilty of bigamy. Now, according to this view of the case, Jones married a spinster, who was a widow at the same time, and yet had no husband and never had one, and never had any intention of getting married; and therefore, of course, never had been married, and, by the same reasoning, you are a bachelor, because you have never been any one's husband; and a married man, because you have a wife living; and to all intents and purposes a widower, because you have been deprived of that wife; and a consummate ass for going off to Benicia in the first place, while things were so mixed. And by this time I have got myself so tangled up in the intricacies of this extraordinary case, that I shall have to give up any further attempt toadvise you—I might get confused and fail to make myself understood. I think I could take up the argument where I left off, and by following it closely for awhile, perhaps I could prove to your satisfaction, either that you never existed at all, or that you are dead now, and consequently don't need the faithless Edwitha—I think I could do that, if it would afford you any comfort.

EXTRAORDINARY ELOPEMENT.

An Old Man Elopes with His Son's Wife—How the Affair was Planed and Carried into Execution.

Elopements are by no means unusual occurrences now-a-days, but one which occurred in Allegheny a few days since is so different in its character from the usual elopements that it can only be classed among the extraordinary. The knowledge of the facts connected with the affair is as yet confined to a comparatively small number of persons, but, like murder, they "will come out." From information we received, it appears that some time since a young man, hailing from Philadelphia, settled in Allegheny City and finally married a young woman who resided in one of the suburbs. The domestic relations of the couple seemed, to be of the most pleasant character, and the husband, energetic and industrious as he was, seemed to be prospering. Some months since the father of the young man, who was possessed of considerable means and a resident of Philadelphia, paid a visit to his son. He remained a short time, and then returned to his home. Before leaving, however, he congratulated his son upon the excellent choice he had made in his matrimonial alliance, expressed himself well pleased in every way with his daughter-in-law. Of course the son was considerably elated over the matter, and doubtless took the first opportunity to tell his wife of the favorable impression she had made. Matters passed smoothly and pleasantly, not a ripple occurring to disturb the domestic tranquility. One evening last week the husband returned home and was very agreeably surprised to meet his father, who had arrived from Philadelphia during the afternoon. He extended a cordial welcome, and indulged in the idea that this second visit had been prompted solely by a desire on the part of the father to enjoy the pleasure which his home afforded. The father made no immediate effort to undeceive the son, as to the real object of the visit, but the object was not long to remain concealed.

On Monday night, when the son came home, the wife in the most calm and deliberate manner, stated that she had a few words to say to him. She commenced by assuring him that she had always found him to be a kind and true husband, and that she had not one complaint to make against him. She had discovered, however, that she did not love him as well as she might, and that she had concluded to leave him. The surprise of the husband, when this announcement was made, was overwhelming, and when he had recovered sufficiently as to be able to ask what had brought about this sudden change of feeling and where she intended going, the wife, in the same calm, imperturbable manner as before, informed him that she had discovered that she lored the father, and that she lutended to go with him! The son laughed at first, but when the father, who was present at the time corroborated the statement, he was thunderstruck. The father and wife did leave that night despite the watenfulness of the husband. Before leaving the couple visited the house of a sister of the wife, and took a friendly leave. The husband traced them to that place and thence to the debot, but could not ascertain whether they went east or west. He was so surprised at the suddenness of the affair, and the coolness and deliberation which characterized the plan, that he seems to have been unable to take any effective measures to prevent its success.

Since the departure, word has been sent east and west. It has also been ascertained that the father converted all the available property in Philadelphia into cash, before leaving; and it is supposed that he has with him upwards of ten thousand dollars in money. His wife and family in Philadelphia knew nothing of his operations until receiving word from the deserted husband, and then investigations made revealed the fact that he had disposed of the bulk of his propperty. He had still a sufficient amount left to keep the family from want. It would seem that the elopement was planned during the first visit as circumstances have come to light which indicate that if the husband had made any determined effort to frustrate the designs he would have been quieted effectualy.

The extraordinary character of the affair, the strange infatuation of the old man, and the more readiness of the wife, to become a party to the double wrong makes the case one of unusal interest. —Pitts. Chronicle.

A CALIFORNIA STORY.

BY CAPTAIN MORTON.

In the year 1852, I, with three others who were officers on the good steamship "Winfield Scott," then lying at the wharf in San Francisco, became imbued, as many others before us had, and have since been, with the pervading gold-fever. Resigning our positions in the good ship, we started for the famous gold-mines of "Carson's Creek." Our journey was accomplished on foot, we carrying our loads of provisions on our backs—the sun in the middle of the day terribly hot. The nights being cold, we would build a fire, and wrapping our blankets around us, "put us in our little beds," and then compose ourselves to sleep, soon to be awakened by the dismal bark of the thousand coyotes, bears, and other "insects," that would quickly surround us. A brand from the fire would cause them to scamper off in a hurry, shaking the ground as they went.

Pursuing our course in the daytime, our only guide through the forests being the innumerable "sardine boxes" that literally paved the way, and constautly in dread of meeting the muted cut-throat and robber, "San Joaquin," and his band who were then roaming round the country, the terror of all miners, we finally, at sunset of the ninth day, reached Carson's Creek, and took up our quarters in a deserted log-cabin, standing apart some distance from any other. Building a fire and sending up to the store in the miners' camp on the hill for some beef, we soon felt as if we were capable of meeting San Joaquin, bears, or "any other man."

On looking around in the one room of the cabin, we discovered a platform raised about three feet from the ground (there being no floor,) which evidently had been used for a bedstead, and three of us took our blankets and laid down to get some sleep, myself in the middle; the fourth one, whose name was Jack Davis, having been wise enough to bring his hammock along with him, hung it up to the rafters. Sometime during the middle of the night, the fire having gone out, we were awakened by Jack Davis yelling, "Jump up, fellers, jump up! There's a 'grizzly' under the bed!" He will soon have you! The intelligence of our dangerous position for a time paralyzed us, and neither of us possessing the requisite amount of courage to get up, we soon became engaged with each other in a desperate struggle for the middle of the bed, he being the strongest, managed to hold my own. Meanwhile Jack Davis from his comparatively secure position high up on the rafters, yelled incessantly for us to get up and attack the bear—calling us cowards, sojers, and threatening to come down and lick us, bear and all, which brilliant performance he had no idea of attempting. My two bedfellows, failing to attempt to get the middle of the bed, agreed with me to jump for the door, which we did But now another difficulty presented itself—no one knew how to open it. Our situation becoming desperate, we turned to face the animal, and from under the bed two large red eyes glared on us, while from the rafters came the consoling yells from Jack; "Now he's coming, look out! Yu're all gone! Ain't you a nice set? Sailors! blast you, you're 'sojers!' Go home!" which last advice every mother's son of us would then and there have gladly consented to act upon. Another struggle now ensued between us three, as to which should be in front, or rather who should be behind, when they finally succeeded in thrusting me in front, and at the same time the animal sprang out, striking me in the breast and face, knocking me down, and in my fall taking the others with me. Each one thinking he had hold of the animal while on the ground, we gave one another the most unmerciful pounding that any mortal ever received, being encouraged in our good work by Davis yelling to us, "Give it to him boys! Now you've got him!" until, over exhaustion, we found out our mistake, the animal having escaped through a large hole in the bottom of the door, that we had not observed before.

Striking a light, we presented a forlorn and ragged appearance, and concluded that we were not much at mining-life, if that whichwe had just passed through, was a specimen. Our thoughts were disturbed by Davis asking us where the bear was, and if we had killed him. We made no reply; but mentally swore that we would be even with him. The opportunity presented itself sooner than expected. In the morning we were invited by some of the miners to come to their camp and give them the latest news from home. We started in the evening, leaving Jack behind, as he preferred to sleep in his hammock.

Relating our terrific combat, it came out that instead of a bear, it was a poor old dog that slept there every night, which accounted for the hole in the door. Our mortification at the absurdity of the whole affair was intense, and the miners laughed heartily. At midnight they accompanied us home, and reaching the hill that overlooked the creek where the cabin stood, it occurred to us that now was the time to get even with Jack. Firing our revolvers, throwing large stones on the roof, and yelling like demons, "San Joaquin! "San Joaquin!" we rushed down the hill only to see poor Jack come out in his shirt, jump the creek, and bolt like a shot up Bear's Hill, on the other side of the valley. Through the tangled underbrush he went, the tail of his shirt streaming out behind, and he was soon lost in the gloom.

Awaking in the morning we saw the face of Jack peering through the door, and such a face we had never seen before. Scared was no name for it. The very life seemed frightened out of him.

"Fellers," said Jack, "has he gone?"

"Who?" we replied.

"San Joaquin."

No; we hadn't seen anything of him.

"Jack, where have you been?"

"Fellers, I had an awful time last night. The band was here. I stood my ground and fought them as long as I could, and hurt some of them bad."

"Well, yes, Jack; but what were you running up the hill so for?"

"I was trying to catch the last one that escaped," said Jack.

At this we could hold in no longer and laughed till our sides ached. It finally came to Jack's mind that he had been sold, and knowing the lies we had detected him in, he raved like mad, and would have considered it a personal favo: if we had all indulged him in a fight, which we respectfully declined.

SOLDIER'S HOMESTEAD LAW.

The new Land Commissioner has issued the following circular, which reiterates the law on a point very generally misunderstood:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 6th, 1871.

The 25th section of the act approved July 15th, 1870, entitled an act making appropriations for the support of the army for the year ending June 30th, 1871, and for other purposes, and the only act for the benefit of soldiers settling on the public domain passed by the United States Congress, is as follows:

"SECTION 25. And be it further enacted, That every private soldier and officer who has served in the army of the United States during the rebellion, for ninety days, and remained loyal to the Government, and every seaman, marine, and officer, or any other person, who has served in the navy of the United States, or in the Marine Corps, or revenue marine, during the rebellion, for ninety days, and remained loyal to the Government, shall, on payment of the fee or commission to any register or receiver of any land office required by law, be entitled to enter one quarter section of land, not mineral, of the alternate reserved sections of public lands along the lines of any one of the railroads or other public works in the United States wherever public lands have been or may be granted by acts of Congress, and to receive a patent therefor under and by virtue of the provisions of the act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain, and the acts amendatory, and on the terms and conditions therein prescribed, and all the provisions of said acts, except as herein modified, shall extend and be applicable to entries under this act, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office is hereby authorized to prescribe the necessary rules and regulations to carry this section into effect and determine all facts necessary therefor."

By these provisions the homestead law of 20th, May, 1862, and the acts amendatory thereof, are so far modified as to allow entries to be made by the parties mentioned therein, of the maximum quantity of one quarter section or one hundred and sixty acres of land, held at the double minimum price of $2 50 per acre, instead of one-half quarter section or eighty acres, as heretofore.

A party desiring to avail himself thereof is required to file the usual homestead application for the tract desired, if legally liable to entry, to make affidavit according to the form hereunto annexed, instead of the usual nonhestead affidavit, and to make payment of the $18 fee stipulated in the act of the 20th of May, 1862, and the usual commissions on the price of land at $2.50 per acre, the en ry to be regularly numbered and reported to this office in the monthly homestead returns of the district land office. The privileges conferred by this fact cannot be assigned, nor is the benefit of entry under it available for widows or heirs of deceased soldiers.

Regarding settlement and cultivation, the requirements of the law in this class of entries are the same as in other homestead entries.

Very respectfully,
WILLIS DRUMMOND,
Commissioner.

Hepatized Lungs.

This is a condition of the lungs in which they become obstructed and hardened like liver. It is nearly always accompanied with difficulty of breathing, for the reason that the air-cells in the part of the lungs hepatized are inactive, and next to useless in carrying out the functions of respiration. This state of the lungs is often irremediable, as it can be removed by absorption or suppuration, the latter producing a cavity and destruction of the substance of the lung itself. Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure and Dr. Keyser's Pectoral Syrup will often relieve this condition. It will certainly cure the first cough, whose final tendency is some injury of the lung substance. The first dose of Dr. Keyser's Pectoral Cough Syrup is valuable to any one whose lungs are threatened, and it is superior to any of the vaunted nostrums which are so rife over the country. In this matter of lung diseases, Dr. K. goes to work like a real physician, examines the lungs first, and then prescribes to meet the various indications with whatever remedy may be proper for the case. In the use of his Lung Cure and Pectoral Syrup, all the common coughs, asthmas, catarrhs and bronchial affections, are speedily cured, especially if they are of short duration; and even in cases that have progressed far, they will always do good, and they have been known to cure some very difficult and stubborn cases of consumption, where deep-seated lesions have taken place in the lungs.

The Doctor says he would be willing to contract to cure all the fresh coughs and colds with his two remedies—Lung Cure and Pectoral Syrup. Time and again he has given indubitable evidence of their great power in the cure of every lung malady. The medicines are sold in bottles, at 75 cents and $1.50, by most druggists, and at his medicine store, 167 Liberty street, Pittsburgh, Pa. Lung examinations daily.

—A Farmer employed a gentleman from the Emerald Isle one spring to take care of his grounds. He was exceedingly green, but he was simply to obey instructions, and accordingly he came every morning to receive orders what to do for the day. His first was to spread a heap of manure. "An' what'll I do that for, sir?" said he.

"Why," said his employer, "we spread it so that the roots will find it."

"An they will find it by spreading?"

"Yes," was the reply.

Out went Patrick and commenced his labor.

The manure was very heavy, and by-and-by began to wear upon the sinews of the toiler. About noon his employer went out to see how he got along, and found him sweating furiously, and panting for breath.

"Did you say, sir," said Patrick, "that plants would find the manure?"

"Yes, of course they will find it."

"Well, then, bedad," said the perspiring Irishman, wiping his head upon his sleeve, "wouldn't it be better to lave it in the sthable, sir, an' let them find it there? It would save much hard work; do you see, sir?"

FALLSTON
Foundry & Repair Shop.

Having been Engaged in the Foundry Business for more than Ninety years,—during which time I have accumulated a variety of useful patterns, besides constructing models and taking out patents for Improvements on —and after having thoroughly tested these improvements, I feel warranted in offering them to the public.

COOKING - STOVES

PLOWS,
The GREAT WESTERN has no Superior for this Locality.

STOVES!
Stoves of Different Styles for Heating and Cooking.

The Great Republic Cooking Stove
Has the best Record of any Stove ever offered in this market.

IT TAKES LESS FUEL,
LESS ROOM TO DO MORE WORK,
BEST BAKER,
MOST DURABLE
ALTOGETHER
THE BEST STOVE IN USE

In connection with the stove I have got up a Patent

which occupies little room, no additional fuel, and is not liable to wear out, dispenses with all pipe, can be put on or taken off at any time, and made to suit all stoves of any size or pattern.

Five Hundred Persons
Who have purchased and used the
GREAT REPUBLIC COOKING STOVE,
Most of whose names have been published in the Argus, are confidently referred to, to hear witness of its superior merits as a cooking stove.

Having three first class engines on hand, of about fifteen horse power capacity, they are offered to the public at reasonable rates.
